The answer was that she did not. According to some friends of Miss Linnell at the Y. W. C. A. home, she had a dinner appointment with a man friend on Saturday, the day of ner death. The police have worked on the theory that the paper containing the polson powder was handed to her at that time, but they have not definitely determined that her companion at dinner was the clergyman, as far as is known.

While the accused man was being at taken to Charles Street jail from the Tombs this afternoon, his rooms in Cambridge were being searched by police inspectors, with the object, they say, of finding the remainder of the cyanide of potassium, which druggist Hahn says the minister purchased of in him. The result of their search is unper known.

Avis was a singer in the Baptist church choir when Mr. Richeson assumed the pastorate there four years ago. She was only fifteen years old, but the new minister showed marked attention to her, and within a few months was calling at the Linnell home.

"At first I objected, said Mrs. Linnell, "but only because I thought Avis was too young. I liked Mr. Richeson and thought him an admirable man, and finally consented when Avis told me that he loved her and that they were engaged. The wedding was set for last October, but Richeson's attacks troubled him until he broke the engagement, saying he would renew it if he found his physical condition warranted. He became engaged to Avis again, but they had never set a date after the first, I believe."

Mrs. Linnell told of visiting Boston last week, when she saw Avis and also Mr. Richeson.
